NEW YORK, Oct. 12—Giants and Yanks were ready to start their tooth-and-nail world series argument all over again today.

With the series standing three-all, the rival teams had to take off from "raw" once more, for neither has been able to win two games in a row more than once and from the looks of things they may as well play the ninth game and have it over with.

Rain fell for several hours early today but it cleared up by 8.30.

From his experience with pitchers to date, it seems certain that Huggins will bank on Hoyt and Mays to carry the hot rest of the way. Bob Shawkey, careful and crafty though he is has nothing up his sleeve with which to turn back the Giants. In a pinch, Huggins might send Harry Harper back again, or if Harper failed to show control, young Piercey might get the call.

McGraw, with Douglas, Nehf and Barnes to pitch the last three games, had the edge in the pitching department once more and Giant fans, realizing this, felt more optimistic today.

Young Waite Hoyt and Ole Jess Barnes, by the way, have an equal chance of playing the role of worlds series pitcher here. Each flinger has won two games and the one who can turn in a victory in his next start will have something to crow about.

The Giant-Yankee series has been full of surprises in advance of the first game every one had it "doped" that the terrific batting of the Yankees would be an outstanding feature, while the fielding and inside playing of the Giants would stand out.

President Kills Idealistic Hope of Total Disarmament

BY GEORGE R. HOLMES

Staff Correspondent I. N. S.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12—President Harding today sounded the death knell to idealistic hopes that the forthcoming armament conference in Washington will attempt anything approaching world wide disarmament.

In the present state of the world, the President said, universal disarmament is beyond hope of realization and if the conference in Washington next month effects a "reasonable limitation" we shall think great things have been accomplished.

The President's views—the frankest he has yet expressed—were given in a letter to Miss Ella L. Freed, number 46 Lenox road, Brooklyn, one of the thousands of persons who have written to the White House on the disarmament question.

Townsite Manager Anxious To Have Hospital Reopened

Government Will Offer Every Inducement Possible, Declares E. F. Baldwin. Preparing Plan For Its Economical Operation.

Having clarified the tenant situation at the Harriman townsite and solved the problem of the evicted 124 families, so that today but two of these families remain in the heatless houses (there will be none remaining at the end of this week), Edward F. Baldwin, the new townsite manager, intends turning his attention to getting the Harriman Hospital open again.

Mr. Baldwin wants this Government property functioning and not lying idle as a dead weight on the Government's hands. He does not see any reason why it should not be open and receiving patients. He believes that Bristol needs the Harriman hospital and that the community can afford to operate it to more or less curtailed extent of its facility and capacity. For the Government to dismantle the hospital, sell out its equipment and dispose of the property for some other purpose would be a catastrophe which the people of Bristol would, in time, come to bitterly realize and reproach themselves upon, Mr. Baldwin believes.

Though a new comer, Mr. Baldwin is enthusiastic over the possibilities of Bristol—and of Harriman—and is convinced that Bristol needs the Harriman hospital, can afford it, and cannot afford to be without it, now and in the future.

He is therefore busily engaged in planning out a method by which the community can operate the hospital and in preparing to enlist the leading spirits of the community, including the medical men, back of his plans. He feels sure that he can show them how the hospital can be operated so as to meet all its expenses.

Mr. Baldwin has enlisted the aid of Dr. George T. Fox, of Bristol, in his effort to reopen the hospital and Dr. Fox is presenting the plans to the physicians, with solicitation for their active co-operation. The doctors are understood to be mainly in favor of the reopening of the Harriman institution, if they can be shown how it can be operated without a deficit.

"I am positive that an economical plan of operation can be perfected," said Mr. Baldwin, at his office in the townsite today, "whereby the operating expenses can be brought to $5,000 per annum, or below. I cannot be convinced that the community of Bristol would not be able to raise this sum, or that the hospital itself, from its paid fees and other sources, could not raise that operating expense itself. The cooperating of a few public spirited citizens and the active cooperation of the people of the churches and other bodies in giving benefits, sharing their incomes and otherwise contributing to the hospital would make the support no problem at all. $5,000 could be raised easily.

"The hospital need not be operated in full, or by any means near to its capacity. As to its staff, to run it on economic lines, there could be one interne, one nurse, for day and accident duty, and one night nurse, who need not be a graduate or a trained nurse, one male orderly, who could do janitor service also, and one woman who could be laundress and do the cooking required. I am sure the plan could be worked out efficiently and economically.

"There is one thing certain and that is that this community will never get the chance to secure such a hospital again, and, though a stranger here, I would be sincerely sorry to see the hospital lost to Bristol. The community needs a hospital, with none in the county and with sick and injured persons compelled to be transported to either Philadelphia or Trenton.

"I feel that I can speak for the Government in saying that the best terms that could be imagined will be given on the plan. The Emergency Fleet Corporation management does not want to see the hospital lost to Bristol and can be depended on to co-operate to the fullest extent that could be reasonably expected."

How The Loan Would Be Floated.

Fourth of a Series of Bulletins Issued by the Bristol School Board to the Taxpayers.

To the Public:—

It will no doubt prove interesting to the public to learn how the school board would handle the proposition, should the taxpayers vote at the November election in favor of the bond issue of $150,000 with which to erect a new school building.

The State law provides that a bond issue must be paid off within thirty years. The first work, therefore, which would claim the attention of the board, would be to ascertain what increase in the tax rate would be necessary, in order to pay off the bonds in thirty years.

This tax rate must be figured accurately, because the State law directs, that provision must be made, when a loan is floated, to levy a specified building tax yearly, which shall be adequate to liquidate the total indebtedness within thirty years. This tax is fixed when the bonds are sold and must continue in force until the last bond is paid. Out of the taxes each year an amount representing the building tax must be transferred to the sinking fund and from this fund the bonds are cancelled and the interest paid.

In ascertaining the amount of tax required to float the loan, some careful figuring will be required. It is very possible that the rate of interest will have to be six per cent. Then it must be remembered that every time a $1000. bond is paid off, the subsequent interest required is lessened, to the amount of $60.00. The tax rate being the same each year, this interest on cancelled bonds naturally remains in the sinking fund and increases from year to year. Recognition of this must be taken and provision made for paying off an additional bond whenever this interest amounts to $1000.

Let us suppose, as an example, that the board should decide to begin paying off the bonds at the rate of $5,000 a year. The second year $300 less, which is 6% of the $5,000 paid off, would be required to pay the interest, and the next year $600. less would be needed, while the next year the amount would be $900. less. The sum of $300., $600. and $900. would be $1,800., which would make it possible to pay off an extra $1,000. bond the fifth year and still leave $800. remaining. The saving in interest the fifth year would amount to $1,200., which added to the $800., would cancel two more $1,000. bonds the sixth year. If the computation was carried out on this basis, until the bonds were paid off, it would be found that it would require but twenty years and a 40 cent raise in the tax rate.

With these facts at his finger-ends, the mathematician must work until he formulates a schedule, which will provide for the cancellation of a varying number of bonds each year but will cancel the whole number in thirty years. When this schedule is completed, it will probably be found that a tax in the neighborhood of 37 cents will be sufficient to finance the proposition involving the erection of a $150,000. school building.

When this question of the amount of building tax is settled, then the school board must consider the cost of operating the new building. Janitor's salary, coal, and upkeep expenses will be totaled, and from this total will be deducted the amount which would be saved by the closing of the schools now located in the hose houses. The result will show an approximated amount necessary to operate the new building. Perhaps a 13 cents increase in the

Girl Awoke With Bobbed Hair and Blames It On A Mysterious Marauder

County Farm Agent Will Relinquish Job

General Regret Over N. E. Garber's Decision to Resign Post

GOING INTO FARMING

County Farm Agent Norman E. Garber has decided to relinquish his position and go to farming in his native county of Lancaster. His resignation will take effect February 1st next.

General regret is being expressed throughout Bristol and the township as well as all over the county over this decision of Mr. Garber's, which Mr. Garber has announced as irrevocable.

Mr. Garber's successor has not been officially announced, but it is reported that one has been selected.

Mr. Garber's work for the Farm Bureau in this county attracted State-wide attention because of its success, especially in club work and in winning the cooperation of the farmers for whose benefit the service was established six years ago.

After his resignation takes effect, he will begin farming on a 92-acre farm about three miles east of Elizabethtown. He intends to build up a pure-bred herd of Guernseys and raise tobacco in addition to doing general farming. Having been raised on a farm, there will be nothing particularly new for Mr. Garber except introduction of the more up-to-date method followed.

Mr. Garber's father is also a successful farmer in Lancaster county.

Figures for the present year are not made up, but some of the totals of Mr. Garber's work as for the first five years are very interesting. They are as follows: Visits to farms, 1767; office calls, 1905; letters sent out, 9979; meetings held, 473; attendance at meeting 29,364; newspaper articles written, 229.

These figures, of course give but a slight idea of the vast amount of work accomplished, and the difficulties overcome. In the first year it was a "ret-acquainted" job, missionary work all of the time, and then came the big job of picking projects and gaining the cooperation of influential men in putting them across. It was a much bigger task in the first year or two than can be imagined now, after farmers and rural households have seen the good results accomplished, and farmers' clubs and granges have gotten behind the movement.

During his term of activity in Bucks County, Mr. Garber has organized pig clubs, community organizations, corn shows and corn contests, brought about the Bucks-Mercer corn contest; had the farm products of the county exhibited at Harrisburg; instituted the corn variety tests each year, the potato variety tests last year and this year, potato seed demonstrations and potato spraying demonstrations.

He stimulated the importation of pure bred cattle into the county and the importation of disease free potato-seed. He also brought about the sale of good seed corn and instituted poultry-culling demonstrations, hog-raising meetings and hog-pasture demonstrations.

County Agent Garber is a strong advocate of farmers' organizations, and it is largely due to his work that such organizations in this county at present are exceptionally vigorous and prosperous. He was instrumental in organizing three granges and one farmers' club.

Her Chestnut Tresses Lay on The Pillow Beside Her

SHE WANTED IT SHORT

Father Forbade, And Now She Says She Dislikes New Style

A "Jack-the-Hair-Clipper" is alleged to have stealthily entered the home of Ira Wiltshire, 521 Maple street, some time early this morning and cut twelve inches of chestnut tresses from the head of Mr. Wiltshire's daughter, Katherine, aged 16, an attractive, slender brunette.

Katherine was the last of the family to retire last night, her family says. Her mother is today at a loss to understand the clipping of her daughter's hair. She cannot imagine why anyone would want to do such a thing. "The family has no enemies," she says.

Katherine is a junior in the Bristol high school and did not retire until after the rest of the family was asleep. "She stayed up to study," said Mrs. Wiltshire today.

According to the girl, she went to bed about 11 o'clock and was soon asleep. She says that the first knowledge she had of her hair being clipped was when she awoke this morning, at her usual hour. She turned over on her pillow and there, beside her, lay a bunch of hair. Suddenly she realized that it was her own.

The clipped portion measures about 12 inches. Katherine is a tall girl, with long, dark brown hair which reached to her waist. "She often wanted to have her hair bobbed," her mother said today, "but her father and I would never give our consent. Only the other night she pleaded with her father, saying: 'Daddy, can't I have my hair bobbed?' Her father told her that she could not live here if she did."

After the members of the family had retired last night, with the exception of Katherine, Mrs. Wiltshire called down stairs and told her daughter to look at the doors and windows and see if they were fastened before she came to bed. This Katherine did, she said today. "I not only fastened the front door on the inside, but also hooked the outside screen door.

Katherine, together with her baby sister, Eileen, four months old, and a brother, Charles, aged two years, occupies the front bedroom on the second floor. All of the other rooms on both the second and third floors are occupied for the Wiltshire family is a large one.

The mosquito netting which covers the two front windows of this front room is securely nailed. The netting of one of the windows today shows a large hole, but it does not appear large enough for a person of any size to enter. Directly beneath these windows is the roof of a front porch, onto which it would be an easy matter for a person to climb and thus gain an entrance through either of the windows. There are marks on a tree in front of the home as if a person had clambered up, Mrs. Wiltshire says. This tree stands close to the porch and one could easily step from its branches onto the porch roof.

Katherine says she put her hair up in her customary manner last night when she retired. It was her custom to do her hair up in a loose knot upon retiring. "But it often worked loose during the night," she says, "and fell down."

May Inject Birth Control Into Armament Conference

NEW YORK, Oct. 12—Birth control may be one of the questions considered by President's armament conference as bearing an important relation to future world peace.

The parley will be asked to include limitation of birth rate by the leading nations of the world along with limitation of armaments in any program that may be drafted.

A pledge from each nation participating to restrict its birth rate as a necessary step to avoid future wars will be urged by world famous men and women who meet here November 11th, in the first American conference on birth control ever held, according to an announcement today. Women throughout the world will be urged to declare a virtual birth strike to conserve the world's food supply and limit populations until there is a world-wide economic readjustment.

Major General John F. Ryan, commander of the famous Twenty-seventh division in the world war; Mrs. Thomas Lamont, wife of the well known financier who is senior partner in the firm of the J. Peirpont Morgan Company, Thomas L. Chadbourne, millionaire steel man and chairman of the public committee in President Wilson's first industrial conference and Prof. Irving Fisher, of Yale, are among those who will prominently figure in this birth control conference which will be at the same time as the president's arms parley to stress over population as one of the chief factors in causing war.

FINANCING THE LOAN
The latest bulletin of the series by which the school board is, through the columns of the Courier, informing the public on the proposed school loan most lucidly outlines the method of financing the loan. It is to be sincerely hoped that the voters will, at the coming election, approve the loan so that this admirable plan of financing may be carried into effect.

The increase in the tax rate that will be entailed will, undoubtedly, cause some voters to negative the proposition on their ballot—and some have already made up their minds to do so, beyond any question of doubt. Nevertheless, their action will be indicative of narrow vision and will be an unkind act to the school children of Bristol of this and future generations, as well as an act of selfishness toward the community.

The tax rate will be increased, of course, and quite perceptibly, but the benefits to be derived will appeal to all but those of narrow vision. What if the property tax will be $2.10 and the per capita tax $4.20, as against a property tax of $1.30 and a per capita tax of $3.00 this year? Consider, selfish ones, the great good the new school building will be to the community, to your children and your children's children, or, if you have not any of your own, to other people's children.

Comparison is made in the latest bulletin of the school board of the tax rate of Bristol, the largest town in Bucks County, with the tax rates existent in other towns in the county. The comparison shows, as the board's bulletin well points out, that smaller towns and communities in Bucks County are evidently placing a higher value upon education than is Bristol. The taxpayers of these smaller towns are showing themselves broader minded and more progressive than Bristol will show itself if its electorate negatives the proposed school loan. Consider Morrisville, a neighbor, which is far behind Bristol in progress, and, besides labors under the great commercial, industrial and educational progress disadvantage of having a large city right on its borders. Morrisville pays a school tax of $2.20—and there was no apparent howl about it up there. Yardley pays a rate of $2.00 and Quakertown a rate of $1.70. Bridgeton, in upper Bucks County, cheerfully pays a rate of $2. And so on; while Bristol pays $1.30.

COURAGE OF SEVEN JUDGES
That Texas would subdue the perfidious Ku Klux Klan, uphold the authority of public officers and prevent fanatical lawlessness, intimidation and persecution was a prevailing expectation which contained no taint of uncertainty. It is the unsullied record of this great commonwealth that its democracy, though generous as to privileged enjoyment of the fullest liberty, is exacting as to practical respect for organized government and simple fulfillment of the cardinal obligations and duties of citizenship.

The courage of the seven district judges who have openly attacked and even severely excoriated the Ku Klux Klan is sublime. At the same time, it is but an ordinary exemplification of the Texas system of stabilizing American fundamentals. Their brave action is emphasizing the dignity and justice of the Constitution and the majesty of the law is unquestionably the assertion of majority opinion.

It must be taken into account that the invidious wizardry of masked chicanery secretly made rapid progress all over the country before its prejudicial designs were discovered. In all probability, ninety per cent of the persons who were cajoled into joining the organization were fair and loyal, but were deceived by the spectacular trumpery and plausible hypocrisy of the patriotic appeal. They let their perverted sentiment spontaneously influence them, and did not stop to think that there were 100,000,000 citizens ready to fight for the Stars and Stripes, and regular courts to interpret and officers to enforce the law.

Not only must the basic ideals and republican principles of the Constitution be re-illuminated, and the majesty of the law sustained, but the insidious propaganda of klannish wizardry neutralized. This is why the seven district judges and several mayors and sheriffs have felt obliged to express in action the will and opinion of the majority.

Inasmuch as thousands of credulous citizens had been ensnared by benighting propaganda, it takes personal and official courage—and sacrifice, too,—for these Texas judges and other public officials to assert with boldness, fearlessness and determination what American principles are and what establishments and officers are entrusted by all the people with carrying out these principles. These Texas judges and officers deserve the admiration and support of the whole citizenship.

WHAT 1000 BANKERS THINK
As being expressive of the composite opinions of one thousand bankers of all parts of the United States, Mr. John S. Drum, of San Francisco, president of the American Banker's Association, stated to the country's financiers at their annual convention in Los Angeles, "that in the nature of things there is no room for anything but confidence in the gradual improvement of business."

"It is well to say," he continued, "that there is nothing in our domestic relations, nor in the international situation, that can sustain a pessimistic outlook, or a despondent view that the world has sunk into permanent depression."

The summary of Mr. Drum's conclusions, and his conclusions were those of one thousand bankers, corroborated assertions which this paper frequently has made. The primary cause of the suspended lethargy in business, Mr. Drum declared, is retardation of the adjustment of costs and prices.

Manufacturers, merchants and workmen may not like the counsel that normal conditions will not be established fully and that the era of record prosperity will not get under vigorous headway until the adjustment of costs and prices is completed. Although this advice may be unpleasant, it is the wisest. Conditions are improving, as Mr. Drum said, and the prospect is bright, but, as he also implied, they will improve faster and better under the stimulation of the adjustment of costs and prices.

The three great domestic influences, he explained, which are restraining the adjustment are: Delayed liquidation of cost of labor, sustained high costs of transportation, and continuation of an unsound system of taxation that diverts working capital from its proper channels.

Business men and workmen have it in their power to expedite the return of normal conditions and inaugurate the period of surpassing prosperity. They have the conclusions and advice of one thousand bankers of all parts of the United States as guide. Readjust costs and prices.

HUMAN INTEREST ITEMS GATHERED ABOUT TOWN AND ITS PEOPLE

"Well! here I am," said one of Bristol's dapper young men as he stood before the door of a Radcliffe street residence Sunday evening, and face to face with one of Bristol's school teachers, whom he had longed to meet.

"Well! what of it and who are you?" asked the said school teacher in a somewhat perplexed way.

"Why, didn't you telephone me to come call this evening?" asked the youth as he began to get fidgety and pulled first at his necktie and then tried standing on one foot, like a chicken on a damp day.

Then the fusillade began and the young lady bombarded her unwelcome visitor with a battery of words, which made a machine gun pale into insignificance.

It all happened this way.

The young man, a member of the B. P. O. E., has been anxious to meet a certain school teacher. He has been making many trips a day along the street where said young lady resides. But never was he afforded an opportunity of meeting her. Some of his Elk friends got wise and decided to have a little fun.

The dapper one was called on the telephone at the Elks home Sunday night and a sweet gentle voice of a girl on the other end informed him that she was Miss So, and So, and would like to have him come and spend the evening with her. Did he take the bait. Well, he'll say he did. He took hook, line and sinker.

The young lady who successfully pulled the trick concealed herself in an alley nearby and heard the conversation.

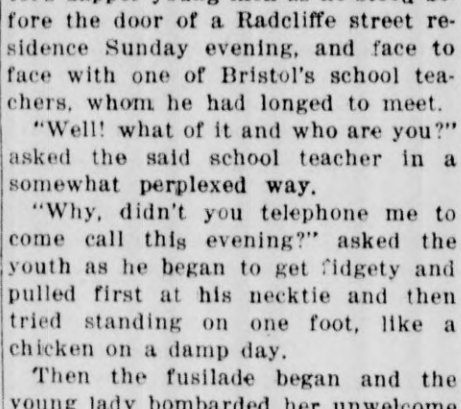

"The saying that 'it pays to advertise', must be right," said Borough Engineer John Roberts. "It must pay the cigarette and the chewing gum people, anyway, for we could have had that flash lamp just put up at the junction of the Bristol pike with Grundy's road for nothing, and had it maintained free of cost if we had let them place an ad. on it advising pill users to 'walk a mile for a dromedary' or gum chewers that 'Wrigley's Mint relieves that dry taste due to dusty roads. The advertisement would have gone on the front of the flashlight signpost. The donor of the sign, preferred however to pay cash and the cost of maintenance, much to the disappointment of the advertising people."

Josiah M. Owen, president of borough council is proudly exhibiting an invitation issued in 1893 to the 50th anniversary of the Hopkins Lodge, I. O. O. F. reception.

The reception was held in celebration of the 50th anniversary of that organization which was formed in 1843. The card at the bottom is signed by six men, all deceased residents of Bristol with the exception of Mr. Owen.

Formerly people worked so hard through the week that they used to sleep in church. They ought to be well slept out by Sunday morning in these times.

Why Business Success Comes to the Absolutely Dependable Employee

By J. OGDEN ARMOUR, Chicago Packer

There is a type of man who is built for success. He may have genius or just ordinary talent—no matter. The point is that he always "arrives." While others plod a weary way, he gets ahead. Those who take note of his progress often cannot account for it. So they say he is "lucky." Or they whisper it about that he has a "pull with the boss." But the secret is deeper than that. He is a man who is absolutely dependable.

Make yourself dependable and you come as near being indispensable as any of us can hope to be. You will be the last one your employer will wish to part with and the first one he will want to promote to greater responsibilities.

But do not be deceived. Dependableness is a rare accomplishment—so rare that every executive is on the lookout for it wherever it may be found. It is not to be acquired by wishing for it. It is the prize that comes from self-mastery.

What is a dependable man? You can tell him by these earmarks: First, he is one you can rely upon to do his own thinking. Business requires thinking and someone must do it. The dependable man never sidesteps his share nor tries to pass it along to someone else.

Next, he is one whose judgment you can trust. He doesn't do foolish things. He knows his own abilities; and, not being conceited, he is equally aware of his own weaknesses. He has the happy faculty of understanding other people's viewpoints and of seeking their advice when he ought. Also he knows when to act on his own initiative.

Finally, he is a man you can listen to, taking stock in whatever he says. You are sure that he speaks only after due reflection. He does not talk to the galleries or for the purpose of grinding his own ax. He makes his own suggestions and pleads his cause solely in the interest of the business.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Saturday came, a perfect day that filled the little valley to the brim with golden sunshine. Alix, driving alone to the mountain cabin, stared in the morning freshness at the blue overhead and said aloud, "Oh, what a day of gold!"

The dog, sitting beside her on the front seat, flapped his tail in answer to her voice, and she laughed at him. But the laugh was quickly followed by a sharp sigh.

"Saturday," she mused, "and Martin expects Cherry to go with him on Monday! Expects her to go back with him to a life of misery for her, existence with a man she hates! Oh, Cherry—my little sister!—there can be no happiness for you there! And Peter! Peter is left behind to me, who cannot comfort him or still the ache that is tearing his heart! My two loved ones, and what can I do to help them?"

"Live in your old house, and be asked, resentfully, as he flipped the pages of his program, with a big thumb and stared at it with unseeing eyes. "What does she want to live there for?"

"The fact remains that she does," Alix persisted.

"Yes, and have just as good a time as if she never had been married at all!" he said.

"You know—"

Alix was beginning the denial that she had given him so confidently last night, but she interrupted herself, and stopped short. The conviction rushed upon her in an overwhelming wave that she had no right to repeat that denial now that the last dreadful twenty-four hours had changed the whole situation, and that she herself had better reason to suspect Cherry than either Martin or his gossiping aunt. She sat sick and silent.

Meanwhile, Cherry and Peter had their first opportunity to speak to each other alone. To both the thirst for speech was a burning necessity, and it was with an almost dizzy sense of relief that Cherry turned to him with her first words.

"Peter, I don't dare say much! Can you hear me?"

"Perfectly!" he answered, looking at his folded program.

"Peter, I've been thinking—about our plan, I mean! Martin plans to go on Monday. But something has happened since I saw you this morning, something that makes a difference! I had a letter, a letter from some woman connecting his name with another woman, a Hatty Woods—she's notorious in Red Creek—and this Joe King crowd that he went with—I don't know who wrote the letter, or why she wrote," she said, hastily, as Peter interpolated a question. "And I don't care! As far as Martin goes, I am free now; what is justice to Martin, and kindness to Martin, will never count with me any more!"

Peter wasted no words.

"He goes Monday," he said. "We can go Sunday. This is Thursday night. Your suitcase I checked again yesterday? Was it only yesterday?"

"That's all!"

"We would have been on the train tonight, Cherry, flying toward New Orleans!"

Her small hand gripped his in the darkness.

"If we only were!" he heard her breathe.

He turned to her, so exquisite in her distress. Her breast was rising and falling quickly.

"Patience, sweetheart!" he said. "Patience for only a few days more! Tomorrow I'll make the arrangements. Sunday is only two days off."

Their eyes met in a wild rush of triumph and hope.

"This time we shall do it!" Peter said.

"Oh, Peter—you'll never be sorry?" she whispered.

"Sorry! My dearest child, when you give your beauty and your youth to a man almost twice your age, who has loved you all your life—do you think there is much chance of it?"

"Why shouldn't it be one of the happy-marriages?" said Cherry after a silence.

"It will," he answered, confidently. "As the weeks become months, and the months become years, and the beauty and miracle of it go on and on, we will think that what we feel for each other now is only the shadow—the dream!"

"Shall I just let Martin think I am quietly going away with him on Monday?" she asked, after a silence in which she was deeply thinking.

"Does he know you had that letter?" Peter said.

"No; Alix is going to speak to him about it," Cherry outlined the talk that she and her sister had had at breakfast.

"Then I shouldn't bring up the question at all," Peter decided, quickly. "It would only mean an ugly and unnecessary scene. It's much wiser to let him continue to think that you don't know anything about it, and to let Alix think that you are ignoring the whole thing!"

"Until Sunday!" she whispered.

"Until Sunday," Peter glanced at Martin and Alix, who were talking together absorbedly, in low tones. "My little sweetheart, I'll make all this misery up to you!" he whispered. Her little hand was locked in his for the rest of the evening.

Morning came, a crystal autumn morning, and life went on. If there was any change at the cabin it was a change for the better. Alix, who had been silent and troubled for a little while, was more serene now, as usual concerned for the comfort of her household, and as usual busy all day long with her poultry and pigeons, her bee-keeping, stable, and dogs. Peter was his courteous, gentle, interested self, more like the old Peter, who had always been occupied with his music and his books, than like the passionately metamorphosed Peter who had been so changed by love for Cherry. Martin, satisfied with the general respects and consideration with which he found himself surrounded, accepted life placidly enough; perhaps he had been disturbed by the advent of the letter, perhaps he was willing to let the question of an adjustment between Cherry and himself rest. It amused him to help get the house ready for a tenant, and from the fact that Cherry talked no more of living there, and made no comment upon his frequent reference to their departure on Monday, he deduced that she had come to her senses.

Cherry, too, was less unhappy than she had been. By avoiding Peter, by refraining even in words and looks from the companionship for which she so hungered, by devoting herself to Alix, she managed to hold her feelings in leash. Even though Alix found that the knowledge of the secret they shared without ever mentioning stood between them like a screen, the sisters, busy about the house, had wonderful hours together.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Saturday came, a perfect day that filled the little valley to the brim with golden sunshine. Alix, driving alone to the mountain cabin, stared in the morning freshness at the blue overhead and said aloud, "Oh, what a day of gold!"

The dog, sitting beside her on the front seat, flapped his tail in answer to her voice, and she laughed at him. But the laugh was quickly followed by a sharp sigh.

"Saturday," she mused, "and Martin expects Cherry to go with him on Monday! Expects her to go back with him to a life of misery for her, existence with a man she hates! Oh, Cherry—my little sister!—there can be no happiness for you there! And Peter! Peter is left behind to me, who cannot comfort him or still the ache that is tearing his heart! My two loved ones, and what can I do to help them?"

CHEERFUL APRON DRESSES CONTINUE TO BE PRETTY

ALL the descriptive names which manufacturers have given to frocks and aprons for housework, that of "apron-dress" is the most fitting. It describes exactly the uses to which these garments are put, for they serve both as dresses and as aprons. A great deal of attention is given to designing them and they are among the most salable of all things ready-made. Therefore manufacturers see to it that their lines are good, their colors pleasing, and the materials used in them sturdy and practical.

The apron-dresses for fall show no new departures in style, but their producers are giving more attention to fit and to attractive finishing than ever. The fabrics used are the ones we are familiar with—fast-color percales in stripes, plaids and fancy patterns, checked and plaid ginghams and solid colors in ginghams and chambrays. In the percales there are dark or light grounds with stripes and figures. White and solid colors in suitable cottons, ric-rac and other bands, pearl buttons with a few tucks in the material, account for the decorations used sparingly on garments which are intended to be simple.

It would seem that there is small chance for much variety of design in frocks that employ so few kinds of material, but it turns out to be otherwise. There are so many patterns in the materials used, so great variety in color and so many color combinations that a never-ending succession of designs are produced. Besides, designers seem endlessly ingenious in the shaping of collars, belts, pockets, and in the placing of such simple finishing touches as buttons or the management of fastenings. A regulation apron-dress is presented in the picture; it is striped percale in the slip-on style, and the simplest design, but is typical of garments of this kind.

general tax rate will cover this expense, so that, in the event of the building of the new school house, it will be necessary to increase the tax rate 37 cents plus 13 cents, or 50 cents. This will mean that the tax rate next year, including the ten cents to cover the increase in the teachers' salaries, would be $2.10, and the per capita or head tax $4.20. This per capita tax is paid by everyone while the $2.10 tax is levied on the assessed value of real estate.

It is interesting to note how the amount of school tax paid in Bristol, which is the largest town in Bucks County, compares with that paid in other towns in the county. Take Morrisville, for instance. The school tax rate there last year was $2.20. Bridgeton, in upper Bucks County, had a rate last year of $2. The school tax in the town of Milford was $1.50. New Hope's rate last year was $1.40. Newtown Borough, $1.60; Perkasia, $1.60; Richlandtown, $1.50; Quakertown, $1.70 and Yardley, $2. The tax rate in Bristol last year was only $1.30. In many of the towns and townships in the county, the residents are paying a per capita tax of $5.00, while the per capita tax in Bristol is but $3.00.

These facts should furnish food for thought. Smaller towns and communities in Bucks County are evidently placing a higher value upon education than is Bristol, and the citizenship is willing to pay the price required, that their children may profit by the enlarged opportunities.

What will be the decision of the people of Bristol at the coming November election? The question is a serious one. The future of hundreds of children is dependent upon that decision. Will that decision mean progress or retrogression? Will it mean to the boys and girls enlarged opportunities, a more wholesome and inspirational environment, or will it mean a continuation of the present unsatisfactory conditions, a curtailment of opportunity and the loss of inspiration.

Fathers! Mothers! the decision lies with you.

Forrest Theatre

The struggle of love against the iron wall of Chinese tradition which exacts from its victims sacrifice without question, is the vital dramatic theme on which "Where Lights Are Low" is based.

It's an R-C Pictures production starring the eminent Japanese-American actor, Sessue Hayakawa, and will be screened at the Forrest Theatre tonight.

Hayakawa is seen in the role of a Chinese prince who falls in love with a gardener's daughter.

When his illustrious uncle, who has planned big things for the prince, discovers the state of affairs he immediately makes arrangements for a public betrothal of the prince to the daughter of a wealthy mandarin.

The prince rebels but finds that even love must give way to tradition in his country.

He is sent to America to acquire Western education and culture and there his overpowering love for the girl of his choice leads him to disgrace in the eyes of his countrymen.

He is ably supported by a cast of prominent screen players among whom are Gloria Payton, as the gardener's daughter and Toyo Fujita, the uncle.

Mrs. Wiltshire says that she did not sleep very soundly last night, because she was anxious not to oversleep, as her husband wanted to go to Philadelphia on the 5.43 train this morning.

President Kills Idealistic Hope of Total Disarmament

Before there can be universal disarmament, the president said, there must be a revolutionary reorganization of human nature, and the present time is not propitious for such a revolution.

The text of the President's letter follows:

"The White House, Washington, Oct. 11, 1921.
"My dear Miss Freed: "Your letters among others that come to me, suggest a widespread misapprehension as to the aims of the conference on limitation of armaments. In my letter of October 5th I said to you: 'I think I ought to correct your impression about the expectation of universal disarmament. It is very erroneous even to suggest that we contemplate going so far as that. If we can get a reasonable limitation we shall think that Great things have been accomplished.'

"You replied that my letter seemed to bring a message of hopelessness to those seeking universal disarmament, and asked me to explain reasonable limitation.

By reasonable limitation I mean something practicable that there is a chance to accomplish, rather than an ideal that there would be no chance to realize. It is necessary to deal with actualities; to do the best possible. Universal disarmament would be beyond hope of realization; even its desirability at this time, might well be questioned. Thousands of years of history recording the wars and controversies of mankind, suggest that human nature would require revolutionary reorganization to make universal disarmament possible. A consideration of the present state of the world must, I think, enforce the conclusion that this is not a hopeful time to undertake that kind of revolution.

"On the other hand, a world with the horrors of recent experiences seared into its mind, and staggering under the load of debt and armaments, has generously justified our hope for a favorable attitude toward the practical effort, the sincere beginning, that we are attempting. The fine spirit in which leading nations have received the invitation to meet and consider these things is altogether encouraging. To undertake the impossible and fail, might leave our last state worse than our first. The attitude of the nations warrants confidence that we will not fail, but rather that substantial results will be accomplished calculated to lessen the armament burden, and to reduce the danger of armed conflict. I feel that in such an effort we are entitled to the support of all people who would be glad—as I can assure you I would—to see still more accomplished if possible.

"Most sincerely yours,
"Warren G. Harding."

Business Looking Up In Upper End Of The County

NEW HOPE, Oct. 12.—Local industrial conditions for the coming Winter look brighter for some time past in this borough and the adjoining city of Lambertville.

Construction on the Union Mills' new brick addition is progressing very well and the building will probably be ready for occupancy before the snow flies.

The restoration of many railroad men to their old jobs at Trenton and at Morrisville, may solve the unemployment problem in Lambertville, many of those out of work being railroaders who did not wish to leave this section as they expected to be ultimately called back to old positions.

The New Jersey Rubber Company in Lambertville is doing some work at nights on orders that came from time to time, and the Smith Sons' Corporation Hairpin Factory is very busy now.

In Lambertville, street work during the past two months has employed many laborers, and the stone crushers north of that city have been shipping a lot of stone lately, all helping in the improvement of business conditions.

Baby chick hatcheries which are the important industry of the farming section are generally preparing for their greatest season in 1922.

Two Cantatas Will Afford Exceptional Choral Treat

The singing of two cantatas, at the Presbyterian Church some time during November, will provide an unusual musical event. The two cantatas will be sung on the same evening. Thomas Snellson is arranging this choral treat.

The first will be "The Singing Flowers." Special scenery and special electrical effects will be used. Nine well known local artists are preparing for the special parts.

The second cantata will be "The Rolling Seasons", the principal parts of which will be sung by local talent, sustained by a chorus of fifty voices. The rendition of both cantatas will be under the leadership of Mr. Snellson.

Rehearsals for the chorus will be started Friday evening of this week in the Presbyterian church. Singers of Bristol and vicinity will be invited to join the chorus.

Grand Jury May Take Up Trenton Sunday Movies

TRENTON, Oct. 12.—The Mercer County Grand Jury may take up the holding of Sunday movie shows in Trenton last Summer and indictments may eventuate.

Supreme Court Justice Trenchard, in charging the jury, told the jury that it might be called upon to probe the subject. He said that such shows were in violation of the vice and immorality act of the State and the theatres in which they were held could be indicted as disorderly houses.

The co-operative plan of home buying, through the medium of Building Associations, has resulted in Bristol becoming a home owning, home loving, industrious, and thrifty community. The most advantageous site for manufacturing interests.
